Khrushchev Is Buried in Moscow

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 (WP).— Nikita S. Khrushchev was buried here today in a coffin draped with red and black cloth, under a gray and drizzly autumn sky. His funeral was small and strictly unofficial.

Perhaps 150 Russians joined foreign newsmen and dozens of police in Moscow's Novodevichye cemetery to pay final respects to the former leader of the Soviet Union, who lay in an open coffin covered with flowers during the brief cere-

Nevertheless, the former pre mier's 36-year-old son, Sergei, managed to inject some drama into today's ceremonies. Shortly after the open coffin was placed on a table beside the grave. Serget stepped upon the pile of freshly-dug earth heside the empty hole and addressed the crowd, many of them squeezed into the narrow pathways between other graves.

The throats of eight slain hostages had been slashed, officials said, and one employee was shot to death. In addition, a guard had died Saturday of injuries suffered when thrown from a second-story window Thursday.

Altogether 38 persons were killed in the five-day rebellion. Richard Smith, 31, a local resident and former Army medical corpsman who volunteered to help the wounded prisoners, said. "it looked like a war" inside the

He said at least 100 prisoners were being treated for gunshot wounds, broken bones and cuts. "Some of the wounded are likely to die." Mr. Smith said. "It was the worst thing I ever saw."

The assault was ordered with extreme reluctance" by State Corrections Commissioner Russell G. Oswald after consultation with Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller following an ultimatum to the rebellious prisoners that they re-lease the hostages and return to their cells. The ultimatum was answered, Mr. Oswald said, when the prisoners "callously herded eight hostages within our view with weapons at their throats."

"The armed rebellion of the type we have faced threatens the destruction of our free society," Mr. Oswald declared. "Further delay and negotiations would have jeopardized more lives." [President Nixon telephoned

Pope Changes Church's Ritual For Confirmation

ROME, Sept. 13 (NYT).—Pope Paul VI changed the ritual of confirmation, one of the seven sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church, by an spostolic constitution published today.

The reform consists mainly in the adoption of what the pontiff termed in his decree a "very ancient formula" in use in Eastern churches. Bishops and certain other Roman Catholic churchmen exceptionally authorized to administer confirmation will henceforth do so by anointing the person receiving the secrement and pro-nouncing the Latin words "Accipe siensculum doni Spiritus Sancti," or an approved translation.

The new confirmation formula may be rendered in English as "Accept the sign of the gift of the Holy Spirit," but no version in English or any other modern language has yet been authorized The new ritual is obligatory as of Jan. 1.

Church doctrine defines confirmation as the conferral of grace on baptized persons strengthening them for the profeation of the Christian faith

Mr. Khrushchev's three daughters, Yulya, Gelena and Rada, were all at the funeral, as was his son-in-law, the former editor of Izvestia, Alexei Adzhubet. The daughters had more trouble than Nina Petrovna holding back tears.

After all who wanted to had walked past, Mrs. Khrushchev tearfully put her hand on the forehead of her dead husband. Others in the family then did the same. Workmen then put the top on the coffin and nailed

The casket was carried a few feet to the grave, and two ropes were strung under it. The band played the Soviet national anthem, and a man stood at the head of the grave holding a red pillow on which all of Mr. Khrushchev's 27 medals were pinned. Cemetery workers lowered the coffin into the grave, and onlookers tossed handfuls of dirt into it.

A Single Rose

Five workers in blue smocks filled the grave and made a neat mound on top of it. Nina Petrovna laid a single rose atop the mound, and the cemetery workers then propped four big wreaths around it, two from family and "comrades." and set up a marble elab, about 20 inches by 30, engraved simply in gold:

He said he was released some hours later, after the police captain detaining him had received word that the funeral had end-ed. He was given no details of what the alleged act was to be, he sdded.

His father, Gen. Iona Yakir, was shot in 1937 as Stalin launched his purge of the senior Red Army officers. His name was restored to the history books by Mr. Khrushchev.

The assault started with a small helicopter sent to one corner of the huge celiblock "D" building to divert the attention of the rebels. Soon, two larger Army helicopters moved in, dumping what one official called "tons" of tear gas on the building.

"Surrender peacefully. You will not be harmed," a bullhorn blared to the prisoners. "Surrender the hostages. Surrender the hostages. Lie down on the floor and put your bands on your

Mr. Oswald said he had no alternative but to order the assault because prisoners were becoming increasingly well-armed with knives made in a prison shop they controlled. He said they also were erecting barricades that soon would have been difficult to break through.

"It became apparent to me that the situation was rapidly deteriorating and It was evident the prisoners were not going to cooperate," he said. "Their behavior was not too much different than their behavior on the streets. where several were convicted of mansleughter and murder."

Capt. Elmer Ruchn, one of the freed hostages, said the prisoners "became more militant" efter the ultimatum was delivered.

"We were so near death so many times in the last five days, it's unbelievable, unbelievable," Capt. Huchn said.

He said that provision has been made for Mr. Kohl to stay in Bonn if necessary.

The Bahr-Kohl talks aim to implement improvements in the situation of Communist-encircled Berlin provided for in the Berlin agreement signed by the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France two weeks ago.

The second round of the talks broke up in East Berlin last Thursday with Bonn accusing the East Germans of using a text different from the mutually agreed German translation of the fourpower accord, employed as a negotiating hasis. They are working on practical details regarding traffic access and travel rights of West Berliners.

Mr. Von Wechmar reaffirmed today that the government be-lieves there is no purpose in getting down to negotiations until both sides have agreed on a "Our attitude is that there was agreement over the text. The East Germans do not deny this." he said. He said there has been contact between Mr. Bahr and Mr. Kohl since they last met. Asked how tomorrow's talks could make progress if neither side budged on the translation issue, he said: "If there is no unity tomorrow, new attempts could be made the day after or next week."

LONDON, Sept. 13 (WP).—The Protestants that the tall prime ministers of Britain, Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland will meet Sept. 27 and 28 to discuss possibilities for ending the might- tion, Earlier hopes that the meetings could take place prior to the special session of Parliament, recalled from recess to debate the Ulster problem Sept. 22 and 23, ap-parently could not be realized.

Ten explosions went off in and around Belfast tonight and police said four persons were seriously injured in one of them, at a private home, UPI reported. No other injuries were reported.] The meeting of Mr. Heath, Irish Premier Jack Lynch and Ulster Prime Minister Brian

Faulkner is expected to focus on two paramount subjects: · Abstement of violence in Northern Ireland by curbing the activities of the illegal Irish Republican Army at its base in Eire. · Measures to restructure the government of Ulster to give the Catholic minority there a satisfactory and equitable role in it. In preliminary political fencing before today's announcement, Mr. Lynch bad insisted that the talks must be without conditions on topics for discussion, meaning that he reserved the right to talk about ultimate unification of the six northern counties with the 26 in the republic. Businessmen Give Nixon Policy Views

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (IHT).-President Nixon met today with business leaders to discuss possible economic policy after the expiration of the wageprice freeze, while George Meany of the AFL-CIO took labor's case against the President's economic program to Capitol Hill.

The meeting with business leaders was the second of a series of consultations scheduled by Mr. Nixon. The first, with labor leaders, took place last Friday. Others, including meetings with farm organization leaders, the executive commission of the National Governors' Conference, consumer representatives and congressional aders, will take place this week.

After today's meeting, James M. Roche, head of General Motors, said that the business community preferred that the government play an active role in antiinflationary programs to follow the freeze. Before the meeting. Archie K. Davis, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said that he favored continued administration of wage and price controls by the Cost of Living Council, headed by Treasury Secretary John B. Connally.

Meantime, AFL-CIO president Meany told the House Ways and Means Committee that the Nixon tax program was "a giant raid on transfer billions in public funds into the treasuries of big busi-

The Democrats went into a huddle tonight to frame their response, but its likely tone was indicated by Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, who said: "Patriotism is no substitute for a program of substance. President Nixon hasn't faced economic reality vet."

The economic argument dominated a full day of private and public discussions among administration officials, congressional leaders and state executives here for the 63d annual National Governors' Conference,

Among the main developments: • Long-time advocates of revenue-sharing were cheered by reports that House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur Mills, D., Ark., might approve a version of that plan-not called by that name—which would put $5 billion a year into state and local treasuries.

 Mr. Agnew signaled an administration willingness to compromise with Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D., La., who made a major attack on the Nixon welfare reform bill in a speech to the o Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama served notice that he will try to bring the controversial busing question before the con-ference at its final session on What some governors hailed as a breakthrough in the long fight for revenue-sharing was a staff proposal, drawn up by aides of Mr. Milis, for a two-part package of new federal aid to states, counties and cities.

As circulated here, one part would provide 3.5 billion a year to cities and counties for the next three to five years, for use at their discretion in certain broad areas of public need, excluding education.

The second part would be a permanent appropriation to the states, starting at $1.5 billion a year and possibly increasing as federal revenues increase, for any use they decide.

Governors who had been briefed on the plan said they had been that told Mr. Mills indicated it might pass the Ways and Means Committee as early as next month. Others, who recall-ed similar optimistic reports from Washington at previous conferences, said they were skeptical.

Yesterday, Mr. Agnew volunteered to become the personal liaison man between the White House and the nation's governors, in a move that some governors interpreted as an efto enhance his standing the President and his prospects for renomination to a second term.

Mr. Agnew compled the offer with an invitation from President Nixon for the executive committee of the National Governors Conference to meet with him at the White House cn Thursday to discuss the second phase of his new economic policy. The executive committee accepted both the liaison offer and the White House invitation—thus giving the administration an opening-round victory in the political maneuvering surrounding the meeting of the governors.

On Air Bags

By Christopher D. Lydon WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (NYT).—Ralph Nader, back in the auto safety field where his consumer campaigns began urg-ed Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe yesterday to hold firm against auto manufacturers' pressures to delay the installation of air bags in 1974 models.

The National Righway Traffic Safety Administration, an agency of the Department of Transportation, has said that air bags— which inflate instantly in a crash-could save 5,000 lives in the first year after they were installed in the front and back seats of new cars.

The agency has ordered that the bags or some similar crash protection be installed in new models no later than mid-August, 1973. But the auto makers, who are challenging the order in court, are lobbying privately to have it reversed in the executive A spokesman for Mr. Volpe confirmed that representatives of the auto industry, particularly of Chrysler, had been pressing the department for a postpone-"Some consideration is being given to extending the time when air bags would be required," the spokesman said. "But no decision has been reached." He added that any postponement would be for at least a year, since the starting date for air-bag installation will coincide with the annual cycle of new In a public letter to Mr. Volpe, Mr. Nader noted that the secretar had consistently supported the air-bag idea, "to a point of high personal identification with its life-saving value."

Mr. Nader continued: "You have large suppliers of this feature showing how practicable the feature is and how capable they are in tooling up for production You have a solid unanimity of your National Highway Traffie Safety Administration staff and director [Douglas W. Toms] for no further postponement. "Nothing—not technical capa-bility, production capability or any other obstacle, except the corporate avarice for maximizing profits—stands in the way of your decision to nphold the present

At another point in his letter, Mr. Nader noted that some of the auto companies-not including General Motors, the largesthave objected to the noise and potential injury involved in airbag operations. But all the industry objections have been refuted by the air-bar manufacturers and Department of Transportation staff, Mr. Nader said, The real reason for the auto makers' position, he argued, is that having another year to tool up for air-bag installation would cut their costs, increase their profits and give Ford and Chrysler a chance to catch up with General Motors' relatively advanced air-bag planning.

Senate Panel Opens Hearings On Gun Curbs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (IHT). -The Senate juvenile delinquency subcommittee opened a new round of hearings on gun controls to-day with Chairman Birch Bayh, D., Ind., accusing the administration of failure to keep guns out of the hands of criminals.

Sen. Bayh's panel is hearing testimony on proposed legislation to outlaw handguns, especially the cheap "Saturday night specials"-low-caliber pistols made from parts purchased abroad and ssembled by manufacturers in the United States.

The Gun Control Act of 1968 barred importation of cheap foreign-made guns but left a loop-hole allowing foreign-made gun parts to be brought into the country. Legislation before the committee would close this loophole.

In an opening statement, Sen. Bayh accused the administration of refusing to send witnesses to testify before his panel declared this was proof that "neither Attorney General John N. Mitchell nor President Nixon is for prohibiting the sale of 'Saturday night specials."

He also told the panel that the Treasury Department had refus-ed to provide information on the sale of pistols. The senator said that of the 10,000 murders by guns last year 43 percent involved small-caliber (22 or 25)

Roman Judges Rule Amnesty Protects Bogus Doctorates By Paul Hofmann

ROME, Sept. 13 (NYT).—Some

Italian university graduates, each holding a dortorate, breathed easier today when two Roman judges ruled jointly that a recent general amnesty had wiped out possible criminal charges of fraud in obtaining their degrees.

The degree holders under investigation were alleged to have bought the theses that are required to be graduated with a doctorate in law, economics, lib-eral arts and other subjects. Academic ghost writers were said to have supplied such disserta-

According to judicial sources, the prices paid for the theses ranged from $500 to $1,200.

The sources suggested that although the penal proceedings had been quashed by the amnesty of May, 1970, there was still a possibility that the questionable degrees might be administratively annulled.

Unlikely Decision

Such a decision, which seems unlikely at this stage, could lead to an upheaval in Italy's professional life and civil service. Many of the questionable "dettori" and "dottoresse" are known to be holding jobs for which university degrees are required. Some are believed to be office-holders in the state bureaucracy. No physicians appear to be involved in the scandai. The scandal of the assembly-line theses loomed two years ago when university professors noted striking similarities in the research papers submitted by doctoral candidates. Two Roman magistrates opened a pretrial investigation, and ordered the police to raid several of the organizations involved. The inquiry extended from Rome to Milan, Bologna and other university cities, and the number of suspects rose to 10,000. They all faced punishment of up to one year imprisonment under a 46-year-old law against fraud in academie examinations. Undaunted by the inquiry, some "research institutes" continue helping would-be doctors. One of them advertises in the dally

Cairo Editor, Jailed as Spy For U.S., Claims a 'Frame-Up'

Egyptian editor now under a sentence of life imprisonment for spying for the United States has erted that he was framed by former Egyptian intelligence chief and that he had kept in touch with Americans in Cairo at the request of the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

A leading newspaper here yes-terday reopened the case of Mustafa Amin, the founder of Cairo's prominent Akhbar Al Yom publishing house, who was arrested in July, 1965, in Alexandria along with a U.S. Embassy official, Bruce Taylor Odell, court in Cairo sentenced Mr. Amin, now 57, to life imprison-ment after he was found guilty of providing the Central Intelli-gence Agency with information centering on Egyptian security. Mr. Odell was identified by the authorities as the CIA contact in Cairo and declared persona non

The Beirut daily, Al Anwar, which employs Mr. Amin's twin brother, Ali, printed the text of a letter Mr. Amin sent to Nasse in December, 1965, pleading his innocence and accusing the intelligence chief at the time, Salah Naser, of subjecting him to the worst kind of physical torture. The message, however, never reached the late Egyptian pres-

Scientists Join to Tune In to Other Worlds

By Walter Sullivan BYURAKAN, U.S.S.R., Sept. 13 (NYT) .- Last week, for the first time since life originated on this planet, its most intelligent species met at an international conference to consider the possibility of communicating with life on other

Those attending the conference, sponsored jointly by the Soviet and American Academies of Science included Nobel Jaureates and leading specialists in the origin of life, the development of intelligence systems, cuitural evolution, language, radio, astronomy and electronics.

The sessions were held at the astronomicai observatory here. within sight of the snowy cone of Mount Ararat, where Noah's ark is reported to have been, across the Turkish border. In such proximity to the world of tha Bible, the conference discussed what would be the effect of the discovery that superior beings exist elsewhere, and it was widely agreed that it would be worldshaking m its impact.

Other Worlds Probable

There was wide agreement based on the latest astronomical and blological reasoning, that great numbers of other worlds bave probably developed along lines very similar to those of the earth in its early history.

It was also agreed that life may centage of these worlds and that an intelligent technological species may have evolved on some. Since the earth's technology is developing at an almost explosive rate in terms of astronomical tima scales, it was calculated that some of these technologies bave reached extraordinary capability.

Such civilizations could, it was thought, be trying to make contact with other civilizations. In a resolution adopted almost unanimously at the end of the conference, it was proposed that the chances of intercepting such signals were aufficient to justify a serious search.

Russians Receive Signals The Russians revealed that they conducted two experiments last year designed to intercept signals from distant civilizations. In ona series, a transcontinental network of stations received a number of simultaneous pulses of suspicious origin, but because they tended to occur in daylight they are believed to have originated in the interim committee was formed to organize a permanent international group to coordinate research in this field. Two areas of search were proposed.

One would concentrate on the several hundred nearest stars and other nearby objacts where "astro-engineering" activity by a super-civilization might be modifying celestial bodies.

The other area of search would seek the beacons of far more distant super-civilizations, including tionse in nearby galaxies. In this case an entire galaxy of hillions of stars could be scanned at once for any indication of variable emission or signal.

In assessing the likelihood of signals reaching the earth from other worlds, two factors emerged as perhaps the least predictable. One, as pointed out by Dr. Francis Crick, is the origin of life. Dr. Crick, of Cambridge University, who chaired one of the sessions, shared the 1962 Nobel Prize in physiology for discovery of the structure of the nucleic acid Recent research bas strengthened the argument that on any earthlike planet a rich soup of the chemicals necessary for life'a origin is likely to develop. It also appears, Dr. Crick said, that once life has arisen and the process of natural selection has begun, evolution moves forward with almost The uncertainty lies with thosa critical steps whereby the chemicals of the soup organize themselves into self-reproducing units that develop the characteristics of life. It may have happened only once, here on earth, Dr. Crick said, or it may be a common event throughout the universe. Man's knowledga is still insufficient for an assessment. The other area of special uncertainty is the birth of language a: essential prelude to the rise of a civilization. Dr. Kent Flan-nery of the University of Michigan argued that cities and other cultural features of civilization have arisen spontaneously in various parts of the world.

This suggests that the same would happen on other worlds, but too little is known of speech and language to predict bow often they would be likely to arise, be said.

Communications Gap

An effort was made to consider every possible means of communication. It was noted that it is difficult for those ismiliar only with the capabilities of today's world to guess what might be used by more advanced

There was discussion-and for most a rejection—of the idea of firing hydrogen bomba within a critical part of the magnetic field enveloping a planet, thus releas-ing a directional pulse of radio energy. It was also proposed that the atmosphere of a planet such as Juniter be used to focus radio emissions from earth into a very

Another plan was to release pent-up energy in gas clouds be-tween the stars by so-called masering action. In this action, radio waves at a critical frequency cause such a cloud to dump its energy into a highly directional radio beam. In recent years it has been found that this occurs naturally in some regions between distant stars. The use of signals, invisible light or infra-red rays generated by lasers was also debated.

Dr. Charles Townes, of the University of California at Berkeley, who shared the 1964 Nobel Prize in physics for his role in discovery of the maser and laser principles, said that the sending of automated messengers to other stars had not been sufficiently explored as a possible means of making contact. Such messen-gers, he added, could carry flares to attract attention and pictures to tell. about the world from which they came, It was widely agreed at the meeting, however, that signal transmissions by radio or light wave would be by far the most economical way to communicate,

Broad Beacon Urged

A number of participants argued for a beacon transmitting in all directions as the most likely way that civilizations would seek to attract attention, assuming they are thinly scattered among the stars. It was contended that some super-civilizapowerful enough to be received in other galaxies. However, an exchange of messages with such a world would require millions of

The conference was organized by Dr. Carl Sagan of Cornell University and Dr. Iosif S. Shklovsky of the Sternberg Astronomical Institute in Moscow. Dr. Viktor Ambartsumian, former president of the International Astronomical Union and director of the observatory here, served as host. Another such meeting was proposed for 1974.

Russian Canal May Be Dug With A-Blasts

Proposal Meets Some Protest at Geneva

By Thomas O'Toole GENEVA, Sept. 13 (WP).-The Soviet Union is considering the use of nuclear explosives to dig a canal 71 miles long through the west-central part of Russia.

The experiment would involve the detonation of no fewer than 250 conventional explosives and of 20 nuclear explosives with a the equivalent of three million tons of TNT-to cut through 40 miles of the route's hilliest region.

While the plan is nowhere near approval in the Soviet Union, it has been discussed in the last week by delegates here to the United Nations' fourth Atoms-for-Peace Conference, occasionally with some protest. At least one Western delegation has complained to the Soviet Union that the shots would blow radioactive debris into Western Europe and that the plan might alter European

The brief description of the Soviet canal project makes it sound remarkably like the abortive U.S. plan to use nuclear explosives to dig a second canal across the Panamanian isthmus to link the Atlantic and Pacific

This plan was abandoned last year, partly because of expected public opposition and partly because the Atomic Energy Commission was unable to "determine the technical feasibility of nuclear excavation programs."

Red Supply Cache Near Laos

South Vietnamese Black Panther forces destroyed a Communist supply cache hidden near the Laotian border and captured three 132-mm long - range North Vietnamese guns, military spokesmen said today.

It was the first major success for a 13,000-man South Vietnamese task force now in the second week of a sweep across 625 square miles of rugged terrain below the Demilitarized Zone,

South Vietnamese military spokesmen said a 220-man Black Panther unit operating 11 miles northwest of the old Khe Sanh combat base and about a half mile from Laos yesterday and early today withstood a barrage of about 100 "undetermined type" shells directed at their position.

They suffered no casualties.

The spokesmen said the unit located and destroyed three Soviet-built Molotova trucks, 1,400 gallons of gasoline, 200 rounds of 22-mm morter shells and nearly 5,000 pounds of bagged rice concealed in a cava complex near the border.

The unit also found the bodies of 27 North Vietnamese soldiers strikes, which have been supporting the operation, along with the three Soviet-made 133-mm fleld artillery pieces, the spokesman

American B-52 bombers late yesterday and early today supported the drive with six more missions, dropping 500 tons of explosives. One of the raids extended into the southern sector of the DMZ along a North Vietnamese infiltration route, U.S. Command spokesmen said.

U.S. jet fighter-bombers, artillery and naval gunfire yesterday again struck targets inside the DMZ, the command said. The destroyers Edson and Rathburn, firing from the Tonkin Gulf, said there were secondary explosions, indicating ammunition stores had been hit, spokesmen

The command announced that U.S. troop strength in Indochina declined by 900 men last week to a total of 215,800 men in the war zone. It was the lowest weekly withdrawai in seven months. President Nixon's "phase nine" withdrawal program calls for a ceiling of 184,000 U.S. troops here by Dec. 1.

New U.S. Book Calls Hirohik Lottile War Leader, Not Figurehean

By Henry Raymont NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT). Writer's attitude toward

-Emperor Hirohito, long considered by most Western historisms as a figurehead in Japan's road to aggression and war in the 1930s and 1940s, is described in a new book as "a powerful autocratic protagonist of the expansion program.

Tha book, "Japan's Imperial Conspiracy," written by David Bergamini, a former Rhodes Scholar who was born in Tokyo, gives an almost opposite view of the conventional assumption that the emperor was largely a captive of Japan's military

In the book, Mr. Bergamini contends that the emperor was personally and directly responsible for Japan's military designs, from the invasion of Manchuria in 1931 to the attack against Pearl Harbor in 1941.

The book is certain to create a hot debate in political and academic circles, particularly since Mr. Bergamini implies that the emperor should have been tried as a war criminal. Worked at Observatory

Citing interviews with Japanese officials and little-known documents as his sources, the author says that as early as 1921, the then 20-year-old regent established an undercover study group of military advisers and young strategists on the palace grounds Working in ntmost secrecy at the palace meteorological observatory, the book says, the group produc-"the first rough plans for Japan's attempt to conquer half

The 1,280-page book will be published by William Morrow on Oct. 4, a week after President Nixon's scheduled meeting with Emperor Hirohito at Anchorage, Alaska. The meeting represents a gesture toward the Japanese while U.S. diplomatic and economic relations with Tokyo are strained.

One diplomat-scholar to take sharp issue with the author's conclusions is Edwin O. Reischauer, former U.S. ambassador to Japan and professor of Asian history at Harvard, who received an advance copy of the book soms weeks ago.

I'm Rather Appalled'

"I'm rather appalled about this study." Mr. Reischauer said in an interview from Cambridge,

"I think the basic thesis is improbable," he added vehemently. "And it comes at a time when we have real problems with Japan, deep misunderstandings on both sides about real things. Therefore, it is most unfortunate that at this time a book should revive the 'hang-the-emperor' mood that was so prevalent 30 years ago."

Tracing what he terms the origins of the emperor's direct involvement with Japan's military plans, Mr. Bergamini says the first evidence was provided by a trip to Europe in 1921. Ostensibly a goodwill tour to Britain and France it was, according to the future acquisition of vessels and

The author attaches much significance to the presence on the tour of four Imperial edvisers who were to play key roles in internal intrigues and foreign military campaigns. The book also tries to convey a sense of conspiracy by linking the trip with a meeting, heretofore unreported in the West, of young Japanese intelligence officers at the German spa of Baden-Baden on Oct. 27, 1921. The meeting, which the author describes as "the imperial cabal," was allegedly organized by Prince Higashikui after several conferences with Rirohito.

The participants were said to have resolved "to dedicate their lives" to the fulfiliment of a program to purge the army of its conservative leadership and to model the armed forces after Frence "so that Japan too can fight a total war."

Two months after the Baden-Baden meeting Hirohito converted the palace observatory into his undercover research institute, ths book says.

Mr. Bergamini describes it as "a security-shrouded indoctrination center for the voung men who wished to play a part in [Hirohito's] dreams for Japan."

Muriel Juniper has not before had a London one-man show. Specializing in lithography as a student, she demonstrates here a number of other facets of her work. Most are symbolic or emblematic, though some are straightforward landscapes of Mexico and are worked in oil. watercolor and pastel.

Edinburgh Festival

Royal Danish Ballet's Charm, Enthusiasm

By Oleg Kerensky EDINBURGH, Sept. 13 (IHT).

-The Royal Danish Ballet is one of the world's half-dozen leading companies and King's Theatre was sold out well in advance for all five of its performances during the last week of the Edinburgh Festival, Maybe this will encourage Peter Diamand, the festival director, to have more ballet in future as opposed to opera. Anyone seeing the Danes for the first time on this occasion might not have fully understood their reputation; indeed the critic of the leading Scottish newspaper found practically nothing to enjoy and even dismissed the company as having "no technique."

Admittedly the dancers suffered from the cramped, steeplyraked stage which made it par-ticularly difficult for the men to move and jump with the freedom which is their special glory. And be repertoire for this brief visit did not include any of the major Bournonville works which only the Danes really know how to stage and dance and which never fail to enchant and exhilerate an

Nevertheless even minor Bournonville has a charm and farcination of its own, and the Danes brought two examples: "Le Conservatoire," which was left untranslated as "Konservatoriet" when it was brought to London come years ago, and "The Life Guards on Amager," "The Con-servatory" (what is wrong with English?) was one of the worst sufferers from the King's Theatre stage, but even so its period atmosphere, the grace of the girls, the virility of the boys, and the talent of the tiny children from the Royal Danish Ballet School made it a delightful curtain-

"The Life Guards on Amager," consisting mainly of mime and folk-dance, fared better. It starts a bit slowly—there is no dancing during the first half-but the Flemming Flindt himself dancmime is amusing and naturalistic, not a bl: like the conventional mime of the 19th-century Russian classics. We seem to get an affectionate but real view of the social activities surrounding a troup of dragoons billeted on the island of Amager in 1808. There is some sort of plot about Edouard, a lieutenant whose wife catches him flirting with the local girls and tricks him into flirting with her-shades of "Die Fiedermaus"-but the important things are the way the social classes are differentiated and brought to life, the bouncy, tuneful music by V.C. Holm, and the gusto which the dancers bring to the series of unusual felt dances which constitute most of the second half of the ballet. There is also an elegant classical pas de trois in which the male soloist has to "freeze" in the middle of fast steps, one of Bournonville's favorite choreographic devices. And Hans Brenaa, the company's current specialist in Bournonville, has inserted a charming rapid solo for Vivi Flindt, the attractive wife of the director of the comed Edouard at one performance and it was good to see that his vitality and evident enjoyment of the dance have not been affected by his directorial duties. Flemming Ryberg's elevation and precision were outstanding in the pas de trois though Igor Kosak, a Yugoslav who has been with the Danes for two seasons, also made a striking impression in it. Kosak and Scrella England from Finland are the first results of Flemming Flindt's "open doors for foreigners" policy-she fitted well into "Life Guards" and made an assured coquette in Balanchine's "Night Shadow." The most outstanding individual performer at Edinburgh was Niels Kehlet, both as the technicelly brilliant and emotionally ambiguous joker in Cranko's "Card Game" (Jen de Cartes) and as the psychotic dance-teacher in Flindt's successful Ionesco ballet "The Lesson." Few dancers combine virtuosity and dramatic strength so successfully. Perhaps pany is caused by the continued lack of a true ballerina; "Night Shadow" and Roland Petit's "Carmen" ideally need rather stronger feminine personalities than the Danes have available at the moment. But no company surpasses the Danes in characterization, conviction and enthusiasm, only the top Soviet companies surpass them in male virtuosity, and perhaps only the British Royal Ballet captures the many styles of such a varied

Cardin to Sell in U.S.S.R.

DARIS, Sept. 13 (UPI).—Designer Pierre Cardin announced today that he has signed an agreement for the sale of Cardin clothes in the Soviet Union, confirming a report in Women's Wear Daily last week. This is believed to be the first time that the Soviet has imported Paris-designed clothes.

Cardin's salon said that he had designed 15 outfits which will made in India in Indian cotton and silk and then shipped to the Soviet Union in October.

lWomen's Wear Daily said last week that the Cardin items will be on sale in five major cities, including Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Vladivostok. The deal was made through Handicrafts & Handicoms Export Corp., of India, Ltd., a government organization. [Cardin told Women's Wear Daily that neither quantities nor prices had been established. Dining Out in Tel Aviv:

Seafood From Israeli Waters

By Naomi Barry

TEL AVIV (IHT) -Israel has rium of Kibbutz Dan on the Lake the potential bounty of the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Sea of Galilee. However, judging from the paucity of fish restaurants, you might think the country had nothing to draw from but the Dead Sea.

La Barchetta, which opened in Tel Aviv six months ago during the year of the Great Tourist Invasion, has increased the boundarles of the Promised Land to include the surrounding waters. Fish and sea food from Tiberias, Ashdod, Acre, Haifa. Shrimps, prawns, gray mullet, trout, St. Peter's fish, red mullet, nesar, bass.

The cooking is superb. The service is almost silken. The decor is agreeable. The air-conditioning is comfortable. There is a respect for good coffee, either Turkish or espresso.

A few meat dishes are available for "somebody's mother who doesn't eat fish. Why should I be handicapped?" asks owner Dani Stuccilli.

La Barchetta bas a couple of sound reasons for excellence. It ts a joint enterprise between Aldo Nahum, an Italian from Libya, who owns a successful local restaurant—the Gondola and Dani, a former Milanese whose experience includes several years as tha maltre d'hôtel of the rooftop restaurant of the Cava-come to read or to eat?" We wanted to sample the maximum and did. Herewith a few of the high points.

Churks of burl, gray mullet from the Sez of Galilee, had marinated for a day in white wine, oil, capers, olives, onion and garlic. The result is splendid. The same fresh-water burl, prepared in the North African styla called haimi, is equally deliclous. The fish is sauteed in oil and then simmered in a fragrant stew of onions, garlic, tomatoes, red pimiento exotically flavored cinnamon, caraway seeds, and wine vinegar. Plain perfection is the trout amandine. The story has it that bomb once destroyed the viva-

The tentacles of sould are boiled in a fumet and then given a 10-minute reheating in a piquant sance typical of the lands of the sun, made with oil, garlic, peeled tomatoes a quantity of chopped parsley, lemon juice, white wine, and touch of cognac. Divided Worlds

There is as much symbolism in the reports from the Soviet astronomical station at Byurakan as in any modern novel or play. But, for a change, most of the symbols are Byurakan has been the site of an international conference to discuss the posafbilitiss and methods involved in interplanetary communication. The very idea of whispers from intelligent life in far outer space penetrating to the earth is drama of the first order; the mobilization of the skills man has acquired on this earth to intercept such transmissions is equally dramatic. And the fact that the meeting, on Soviet soil, is sponsored jointly by the Soviet and American academies of science may be the most dramatic aspect of all.

Mere communication is not in itself necessarily good. It can heighten tensions, call for immediate decisions that might or might not be wise, and precipitate crises that might otherwise evaporate. But the almost instant communication now available on earth hae its values; there is something reassuring in the very fact that a "hot line" exists to bring Washington and Moscow in touch. The report that the 'hot line' is considered the key to an impending effort by the United States and the Soviet Union to prevent nuclear accidents from touching off nuclear war adds to that reassurance.

Many have speculated that if life has emerged in other solar systems, and has more or less paralleled its development here, earthly man's neighbors in the universe might regard him with scorn; his achievements in technology have so outpaced his real intelligence as not only to imperii his own existence but make his incursions into outer space a kind of barbarian invasion of a presumptively civilized portion of God's vast handiwork.

This, of course, is pure assumption. The relative peaks or valleys created by the life force on earth, as compared with other planets, can be established only if human science can make contact across light-years of space-and comprehend whatever transmissions may be received. But earth-man's own judgment of his capabilities and accomplishments are deservedly harsh, since it is he and his progeny who must suffer for his failures.

The Byurakan conference and the international effort it represents can, however, be chalked up on the credit side. Whether or not any comments from outer space are received, whether or not they might translate into an electronic version of the handwriting on the wall-"thou are weighed in the balances and art found wanting"-it is good that men should come together to try to find ont. And it is quite appropriate. symbolically, that Byurakan is within sight of Ararat, with all its memories of a dove that returned with an olive branch, of an ark that landed to replenish the earth after

Last Chance in Vietnam

Two anthoritative voices now have challenged the administration's hand-wringing or Congress cut off aid because of his oneact over the political crisis in Vietnam and its claims that it has done all it can to influence President Thieu to turn his singleslate presidential "election" into a real contest.

The threat by Sen, Henry M. Jackson of Washington to vote against further economic or military aid to Saigon unless the administration prevails upon Gen. Thien to hold a genuine election indicates the distress felt by long-time supporters of American policy in Vietnam.

South Vietnam's Supreme Court and its National Assembly could constitutionally reopen the race to other candidates, if General Thien requested action. The Nixon administration, Sen. Jackson said, "should stop pretending to be helpless, saying there is nothing more to be done." The United States, he added, "still has sufficient in-Evence in Vietnam to see that a pointless referendum is transformed into a meaning. ful political contest-if necessary, at a later son statement but published fortuitously at about the same time. As reported by the columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, South Vietnam's president said he could not stand up against an American threat to cut off aid. He disclosed that he had informed South Vietnam's generals man race for re-election. "We need military assistance to conduct our self-defense," Gen. Thien said.

There have been other indications of concern within the military junta that rules South Vietnam. But none could be more conclusive than President Thieu's own revelation of the assurances of readiness to quit he felt ft necessary to give his colleagues. The Thien and Jackson statements refute the administration's denials of responsibility for the electoral farce now under way in Saigon, Mr. Nixon's failure to intervene to assure the people of South Vietnam an opportunity to choose their own government undermines the moral basis for claims by four American Presidents to justify intervention in Vietnam's civil war.

But Mr. Nixon is not the ultimate arbiter. as the Jackson and Thieu statements demonstrate. A firm position by Congress, making further aid conditional on a fair and contested presidential election in South Vietnam, undoubtedly would set such a contest This assertion has now been verified by in motion. What is essential is a three-way none other than President Thieu himself in race including Vice-President Ky and Gen. Duong Van Minh, who is the candidate of the Buddhists and other major opposition forces in South Vietnam. Both Ky and Gen. Minh undonbtedly would re-enter the campaign if adequate machinery for joint and impartial supervision of the election were established by mutnal agreement.

Mr. K's Departure

Wherever they bury Nikita Khrushchev they cannot write him out of the history of the Soviet Union, though this is what the Kremlin in its Orwellian way has been trying to do ever since he was dispatched into official oblivion in October, 1964. The non-announcement of his death by the Russian news media, even if it could be eustained, could not make him an unperson. Russia and the world bear the marks of the Khrushchev years, and nobody can rub them out. To evaluate his impact, however, will long be a matter for argument. His personality does not make it easier. To Western eyes he was enormously more attractive than the manic Stalin or the sallow-faced bureaucrats with whom he contended for power. At least he was human. He even made jokes against himself. The sheer rarity value of a laugh from the top man in the Kremlin made him almost endearing. Yet history will not forget that he was Stalin's henchman in Moscow and the Ukraine, and that he was deeply implicated in the purges that he later denounced.

Nixon and Peking

The main motive of Nixon's [Peking] efforts is undonbtedly an attempt to deepen the division in the anti-imperialist camp and to take advantage of the anti-Soviet stand of the present Chinese leadership. Although Nixon repeatedly said the rapprochement with China is not directed against the Soviet Union or any other third countries, it is clear that all this happens on an explicitly anti-Soviet basis.

It will be interesting to know how far the present leadership of the Communist party of China is ready to go on its sinuous road. How far will they go against the vital interests of People's China, against the interests of the joint struggle against imperialism, againt the interests of world Commu-

Big Four on Mideast

Many believe the time has come for Britain to map out a common [Mideast] plan with France and the Soviet Union, especially in salvaging the Big-Four talks, which have now almost ground to a halt over the U.S. attitude. London is said to have refrained thus far from siding with Paris and Moscow because it did not want to jeopardize any chance left for an American "persuasion" of Israel. But now the U.S. time has been overstretched and it has exhausted all its chances, the net result being a situation which threatens a big blowup in the Middle East of unpredictable consequences.

PARTS—Signs are multiplying that the campaign of the free silver Democrats is rapidly breaking up. The rats are rapidly deserting the sinking ship. On the other band the sound money Democrats are enthusiastic and indefatigable. At Indianapolis last Saturday, Senator Palmer ably explained the purpose of the party: "To save the country from repudiation, bankruptcy and national dishonor." One of the biggest reasons for the optimism the party has been displaying is that they have the full support of President Cleveland.

NEW YORK-The State Department today took occasion to settle the growing impression that there will be separate conferences on disarmament and on the Far East, saying there would be only one conference of which all problems will be considered. It was pointed out that President Harding limited invitations to as few nations as possible in order that discussions be conducted on the friendliest lines, with the hope of reaching conclusions in the chortest time with the least friction.

Prime Minister Jack Lynch ap-pears to have decided on a course of hard bargaining and tough poker-playing in order to wring maximum concessions from the London and Belfast regimes for the Catholic minority in Ulster and maximum political gains for

He needs them, because his political position, beset by oppo-sition from the left and right, is not the sturdiest in the world. He dare not appear as a patsy in allowing a half-a-loaf settle-ment. His goal is to emerge as the hero who successfully champloned the Catholic cause in Northern Ireland.

But there is a limit to the con-Ulster government can make in favor of the minority. It is by no means certain that Lynch appreciates what that limit is: the danger is that he will overplay his hand and support his clients to the North-principally the Social Democratic and Labor party-beyond the breaking point. In the present inflammatory circumstances of Ulster, a mistake of that sort could mean civil

Tough With Heath

Por the moment, Lynch's tough stance is serving him well politically. He has won admira-tion for being appropriately surly to Briton's Prime Minister Edward Reath and he takes the popular line that the problem of violence by the Irish Republican Army is one for the British Army in Ulster to solve and that none of its devilry is Irish-made.

Thus, Irish government officials will assert with straight faces that only a trifling part of the tons of gelignite exploding day and night in Londonderry and Belfast is being smuggied over the Irish border, and that few if any of the men detonating it are from the South.

Lynch's thesis on the root-andbranch political reconstitution that must be made in Ulster is that the British parliamentary system now in effect there may be appropriate to England but not to Ulster-that it cannot operate justly or effectively in a sectarian situation where one group, the Protestant two-thirds of the population, is a perpetual, winner-take-all, majority in government.

Elsewhere, in America, England or any other Democratic country, there can be an alternation of government party, following an election. In Ulster, because of the dominance of sectarian voting -due to the Protestant-versus-Catholic issue in every electionthe Unionist party is bound to win, forever.

A correction, to give the minority in the government a fair, proportional and protected share, is 50 years overdue.

In Two Steps

Accordingly, the argument continues, the starting point is to decide on what is a complete, not an illusory, halfway, remedy and the second step is to contrive the security measures necessary to let it be installed and take effect. Hitherto, the Irish allege, Britain and the Stormon's government have played it the other way around: Pressed for reforms and acknowledging that some must be made, they decided first bargaining chip. If the triptych is completed by inter-German agreement, for which the outlook is good but not certain, the result will be considerable improvement over preexisting conditions in Berlin. However, the "Berlin problem" will not by any means have been "solved."

The occupying governments have agreed on four major principles and relegated to the German governments the making of detailed arrangements for carrying out the first three.

The first principle is that transit traffic of civilian persons and goods across East Germany between West Germany and West Berlin is to be unimpeded, facilitated, expeditious, and to receive preferential treatment. The second principle commits the Western powers, in exercising their rights in West Berlin, to maintain and develop the ties between those sectors and West Germany and also to continue to regard West Berlin as not part of West Germany and not governed by it. No element of the West German government will perform official acts in West Berlin to the contrary. That government may maintain a liaison agency there accredited to the three occupying powers and the Senate of West Berlin.

By the third principle, communications between West Berlin and areas of East Berlin and East Germany will be improved. Per-manent residents of the Western sectors will be permitted to visit East Berlin and East Germany freely and additional crossing points will be ordered. Problems of small enclaves may be solved by exchange of territory. Telecommunications and transport communications of West Berliners are to be expanded.

In the first place, a Berlin agreement is a condition precedent to Brandt'e submitting to the Bundestag for ratification his Polish and Soviet treaties (recognizing the division of Germany) and for pushing a European security conference and withdrawal of foreign troops from Europe. These are ends devoutly being sought by the Kremlin. Furthermore, Breshnev and Company cannot fail to have observed that all is not well in the Eastern European satellites. among the Western Europeans and American allies and even in the Communist paradise homeland itself.

The Remedy

In Eastern Europe discontents which drove the Czechs to their own undoing are still moving more cautious neighbors to economic departures from the faith. In Europe monetary discord and transatiantic trade strife are loosening political bonds. The United States approaches its quadrennial anarchy. The Soviet economic revival, which Khrushchev thought would enable bim to bury us, cometh not. In fact. Soviet economic woes are no less than our own, only less publi-

It helps the apparati in Communist countries to divert the maximum GNP to military purposes with the least aquawk. In liberal democracies, however, it leads to the greatest squawk at any diversion of GNP to the suspect military-industrial complex national defense.

Conclusion: The Berlin agreement is no gift: nevertheless, suspect those bearing it. Especially beware of the euphoric fizz uncorked to celebrate it.

The Freeze and Oil

The scorching winds from the deserts of the Middle East are evidently going to thaw the Nixon freeze in one of its most critical areas-oil. The consensus of informed opinion is that the recen devaluation of the U.S. dollar foreshadows an immediate demand by the OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) to renegotiate the recent fiveyear (?) agreements with the in-ternational oil companies, which resulted in an astronomical increase in the cost of oil to importing countries. Long forgotter are the terms of the original concessions granted the major of companies by Middle Easter countries more than a quarter of a century ago. Some of these of agreements stipulated that royalt payments were to be made i British gold sovereigns. Conceiva bly, the canny Arabs, inherenti distrustful of paper money, ma once again require that their lion share of the oil production be pai for in gold. B. F. PITMAN JR.

The Surcharge and U.S. Partners

By Brendan Jones

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT),-Most of the United States's main trading partners have been hurt in some degree by the international measures -- primarily the 10 percent surcharge on imports-included in President Nixon's economic

The eurcharge, combined with the decision to let the dollar float downward in exchange markets while other currencies are pressured, upward, has also caused considerable resentment abroad at what is regarded as a one-sided Amer-

Although in some countries, notably West Germany, there is a feeling that the surcharge may not be as damaging as first feared, in many there is worry that its effects could severely check business and perhaps contribute to a reces-

There is fear, too, that the American surcharge and general currency-value uncertainties could be the spark that might set off cut-throat competition among nations grimly determined to maintain trade in any and all markets, especially

75% of U.S. Imports

These are some of the highlights of a 15country curvey just completed by New York Times correspondents on the effects of the American economic policies on international trade. The countries covered accounted for more than 75 percent of the $40 billion of U.S. imports

In Britain and other Western European countries—and Canada—the proposed American
10 percent investment tax credit on new industrial equipment is regarded-in addition to the surcharge-as the most disturbing new trade barrier. Tha credit would not apply to imported equipment and would thus be a discriminatory measure against which other countries might retaliate.

Roughly 80 percent, or $24 to $25 hillion, of American imports is subject to the surcharge This represents about 8 percent of total world exports by other than Communist countries. · CANADA-Precisely how much the American surcharge will hurt Canadian exports is unclear, but there are grounds for concern, particularly for the effects on comparatively new manufacturing industries and on employment. Canada is the United States's chief trading partner and source of a fourth of American imports, but the import levy does not apply to three-fourths of Canadian exports to the United States. The bulk of these enter duty free or under quotas.

Antes Duty Free

Also exempt are autos, which cross the border duty free under the 1965 Canadian-American Auto Trade Pact. And if repeal of the American 7 percent auto excise does switch buyers to North American makes, Canada's auto plants are likely to share in the increased production.

Some $2.5 billion of Canadian exports, however, are subject to the surcharge, and Ottawa fears that it will nip in the hud the long-awaited decline in the national unemployment rate, which in July was 6.3 percent.

· JAPAN-The heaviest blow will be sustained by Japan's small and medium-sized enterprises, although the surcharge also has raised a formidable barrier to textile exports.

Larger, highly efficient industries—autos, steel and cameras—are optimistic that their competitive power will make it possible for them to absorb the impact of the surcharge in a short time. But the immediate prospect is that the combination of the surcharge and the higher exchange rate of the yen will sharply reduce total Japanese exports by about 12 percent of last year's $19.4 billion total.

• WEST GERMANY-Businessmen still show restraint in making precise statements about the repercussions of the surcharge. There appears to be growing sentiment that they will be less harsh than originally feared, that sales will dip but

According to the Federation of German Indus-tries, about 90 percent of West Germany's sales in the United States will be affected by the surcharge. Autos, the most important item, however, are expected to escape some of the brunt of the import levy with prospective repeal of the U.S. auto excise tax.

By far the hardest hit German industry are the makers of surgical equipment.

 BRITAIN—No exact estimates have yet been made on the impact of the surcharge on British exports, but it is widely assumed that it will cut profits, if nothing else.

The United States is Britain's main export market, accounting for $2.2 billion of sales last year, or about 12 percent of total exports. About 40 percent of these exports are machinery and transportation equipment, chiefly autos, while 25 percent is manufactured goods. While some auto makers are hopeful about holding markets for sports cars, others expect to feel some pinch in

• ITALY-No reliable estimate is available on how the surcharge and other factors will affect Italian exports. The American market, however, is Italy's third largest export outlet, after West Germany and France, and there is general worry over the effects on the major items of this trade -foot-wear, textiles and autos.

 MEXICO—Because of this country's close economic ties with the United States, Mexico la bound to be badly hit by the surcharge. The United States is overwhelmingly Mexico's largest trading partner, buying more than 70 percent of Mexico's exports and supplying 63 percent of its

According to Finance Minister Hugo Margain, more than 50 percent of Mexican exports to the United States some $480 million worth—are affected by the surcharge.

• FRANCE-Only 6 percent of French exports go to the United States, so the aurcharge is regarded as "annoying, but certainly not catastrophic." French business leaders are more worried about the indirect effects, which they feel will deflect more Japanese and West German products into domestic markets and increase competition for French products in foreign SWITZERLAND—According to government sources in Geneva, 93 percent of Swiss exports to the United States—machinery, watches, chemi-cals, textiles, shoes and cheese—are subject to the surcharge. Watch exports have been hardest hit by the surcharge, while machinery exports are expected to be hurt by the U.S. investment tax credit. In addition, the rise in the Swiss franc has added to competitive problems for exporters.

Growth Rate Supply Falls

August Gain Smallest For Seven Months

By H. Erich Heinemann

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT).

The rate of growth in the nation's money supply slowed sharply during August to an annual rate of about $5 percent, the Pederal Reserve Bank of New York said yesterday.

This was the smallest percentage gain in the money supplycurrency held by the public plus most demand deposits—in the last seven months. But in the September issue of its official monthly review, the New York Bank cautioned, in effect, that the monetary slowdown which has been an object of Fed policy since last spring. may have been in part a temporary, technical by-product of the international financial crisis.

There were "extensive purchases of Treesury renmarketable certificates of indebtedness by foreign central banks," the bank said, which had the effect of shifting funds into U. S. government accounts (at least for the time being; that are excluded from the calculation of the money supply.

Percentage Gain

The "adjusted bank credit proxy"-a measure of the total liabilities of Fed member banks that includes these government denosits-increased at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of about 11 percent in August, the largest percentage gain since February "2nd a rate well in excess of the expansion of M-1 the money supply! and M-2 (the money supply plus com-mercial bank time deposits)." The aim of the Ped's policy in recent menths has been to cut monetary growth down to a noninflationary rate. The implication of the bank's comment yesterday was that the money managers may yet have some distance to travel before they reach that goal Meanwhile, two leading private commentators on the money markets reached similar conclusions over the weekend on the likely future trend of interest

Saul B. Klaman, vice-president and chief economist of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, said that in the months ahead the balance of forces in the credit markets "will be struck in favor of stable to ing psychology and lessened in-flationary premiums will be compelling forces."

The Chase Manhattan Bank, in a comment written by Philip Braverman, one of its economists, said that a combination of fac-tors in the money market including "less accommodative" Federal Reserve policy and pickup in business borrowing and potential "disinvestment" short-term Treasury securities held by foreign governments— "suggests potential upward pressure on [Treasury] bill rates which, at current levels, are inordinately below other short-term market rates."

BONN, Sept. 13.—Volkswagen chairman Kurt Lotz resigned today in the face of mounting criticism and falling profits for West Germany's higgest symbol of incustrial success. Mr. Lotz, 58, made it clear that he was leaving involuntarily rather than face a board of directors meeting Sept. 24 which was certain not to renew his contract to run West Germany'e biggest single industry. "I regret that I must leave Wolfsburg now," he said. Wolfsburg is VW's home base, where most of its 200,000 em-

His probable successor is Endolf Leiding, who is currently head of the Audi branch and before that was the highly successful manager of Volkswagen's Brazil plant. Mr. Lotz's departure comes at time when turnover is higher than ever but profits are narrowing toward the zero level. Some forecasts are for a loss in 1972. Concern over profits odded to other criticism of Mr. Lotz, which ranged from authoritarian leadership to poor planning and judgment in diversifying the firm's models. Even politics entered into it: Volkswagen's board of directors is dominated by Social Democrais and Mr. Lotz is a member of the Christian Democratic opposition's economic council. Personnel problems played a role in Mr. Lotz's deporture, the date of which has not been annonnced. He fought the board of directors over the appointment of a Social Democratic politician as the firm's personnel boss, and he

Even the "beetle" itself has fallen on hard times. A new model brought out last year had several serious bugs in it necessitating massiva factory recalls. Total production was actually off by 1 percent.

Two successive revaluations of the mark have hurt, and the competition has now overtaken Volkswagen in such former strongholds as Norway and Switzerland. The result of President Nixon's 10 percent import duty cannot yet be measured, but the optimistic utterances from Wolfsburg that Americans will go on buying beetles at the same old rate appear somewhat hollow. Old Established

FIRST FUND

The concept of Mutual Funds has been-is now-and will continue to be correct. If directed by reputable people with proven expertise.

IS THAT FUND

The majority of directors have built or owned more than $1,500,000.000 worth of properties before their association with the Fund. That's exp:rtise.

The world's largest custodian bank ($14,000,000,000) deals with only one Real Estate Fund.

BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscott

York tournament demonstrated that an expert could fail in a contract that a beginner would make without pausing for thought East began the spectsoular auction with a slightly eccentric pre-emptive bid of three diamonds.

South's jump to four spades did not do full justice to his powerful hand, but was perhaps the best he could do in the drcumstances. West naturally sacrificed five diamonds and North-South naturally continued bid-

North passed, knowing that his partner would take further action, and jumped to six spades on the next round when his partner doubled. East's double of six spades was "Lightner," urging West to make an unexpected lead.

South had so much reserve strength that he was happy to redouble, and West had to make the opening lead. The lead-directing double eliminated spades and diamonds as possibly leads, and West correctly diagnosed that his partner was void in clubs and wanted a ruff.

With any lead but a club, the slam would have been a certainty: The declarer would have drawn trumps, and used the trump entry to dummy to try the clob finesse. If the finesse had lost, there would have been a discard for the potential heart loser, and if it had won there would have been a chance of an overtrick.

As it was, dummy's club jack was ruffed at the first trick and the diamond jack was refurned. It might seem that South was now dependent on the heart finesse, but to his eventual regret he saw that he had a squeeze

A dramatic deal from a New diamond ace, he drew trumps, cashed the club ace and led the remaining trumps.
South knew that if West had begun with the heart queen he would be squeezed: His last three cards would have to include the club king, so he could only keep two bearts. So the declarer eventually played the ace and king of hearts, hoping to bring down the queen. This plan failed, and so did the contract. . NORTH

By James Blish. Dodd Mead. 335 pp. $6.95

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard that sometimes a man will turn over a whole library to make a single book, and this is what James Blish has done in "Dr. Mirabilis," a novel of Roger Bacon, the 13th-century scientist and philosopher. Before he could portray Roger Ba-con the man, Mr. Blish had to master his age, his thought, his books-more than 22 thick vol-umes—and the lives and works of such of his contemporaries as Albertus Magnus and Thomas Aguines. A highly regarded science fiction writer, the author is a passionate medievalist as well, and this book is obviously a labor of love. If love is not blind, it is at least partial, and Mr. Blish elevates Bacon at the expense of Albertus and Aquinas. The "Admirable Doctor" describes Albertus as "trading upon a coinage of dogmatism and intuition." Aquinas is accused of "avoiding new thought as much as possible," and the cranky Bacon goes on to say that "by declining to take risks, he had ended an age of rich theological invention."

SAMUEL JOHNSON remarked

Of Bacon's personal life almost nothing is known, and this has allowed Mr. Blish the luxury of imagining him. But here, after all the brilliant reconstruction of Bacon's scientific and philosophical thinking, it seems that the author has failed to find more han a mere skeleton of the man himself. There is very little of the "admirable" in him: He appears mean-spirited, narrow-souled and coldly inhuman. For a man of so many accomplishments, he has no grandeur at all; his personality has neither breadth nor color. His curiosity has none of the romance of a man who is standing on the brink of tremendous secrets; it is more like the compulsive drive of a crossword puzzler, His famous dispute with Al-bertus—a formidable piece of intellectual drama—has too much of the quiz kids' competitiveness about it, and his routing of Richard Rufus in his own classroom is a very coarse piece of showmanship, depending mainly on a reckless explosion all too redolent of the violence in our universities to-

It is impossible to either like or admire Mr. Blish's Roger Bacon. He seems to be all work and no play of personality. The few glimpses of his early life are ugly indeed. When an old serf risks his life to save Bacon's patrimony
—a buried hoard—from the king's agents, he is most ungratefully treated. Shortly afterward, when Bacon willingly tumbles her on the ground, and thanks her by calling her a whore. This does not prevent him, however, from begging her to visit his room at for The New York Tim-

Dodgers vs Glants SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 13 .-It all looked very familiar to Bill Singer.

The Los Angeles Dodgers had pulled close to the San Prancisco Giants in the standings-closer than they had been since the beginning of the season—and now they were getting beat.

The other two times we got close this year we died; today, we died for a while but we came back, Singer said yesterday. But the Dodgers came by-g to beat the San Diego Padre. 5-3. on a day so hot that they had to use a water extinguisher to water down the equipment that was televising the game back to Los Angeles.

Hawks Sign 7-Foot-2 Payne After NBA Hardship Draft

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT).

The Atlanta Hawks have signed Tom Payne of Kentucky less than 3 1/2 hours after they had selected the 7-foot-2-inch center in the first National Basketball Association hardship draft. The signing precluded an expected money battle for Payne, who was also on the 11-man hardship list recently announced by the rival American Basketball Association. The ABA will conduct its draft tomorrow.

Payne, who left Kentucky after his sophomore year last season, was the second player chosen on the NBA list of six hardship cases. After the Cleveland Cavaliers, the Buffalo Braves and the Portland Trail Blazers bad passed in that order, the Cincinnati

Ryder Cup Thursday

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13 (UPI).— he power-packed American team was scheduled to assemble today and begin catching up with their British rivals who spent the weekend practicing for the Ryder Cup golf competition. The British team arrived early last week to acclimate to become familiar with the 7,273-yard course at Old Warson Country Club, where the competition begins Thursday.

The big guns of the American teem, such as Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, were expected to arrive shortly before today's practice.

None of the British golfers, except for touring pro Tony Jackim, has ever played at Old Warson. One member, 26-year-old Brian Barnes of London, expressed confidence in his team's chances.

"Oh yes, I'm confident," "We're not keen on thick rough like this course has, but the Americans aren't either."

Revson Wins Can-Am Race; Hulme Is 2d

BRAINERD, Minn, Sept. 13 (NYT).—The McLaren team of Peter Revson and Denis Hulme turned in their familiar one-two finish yesterday in the Minneapolis Tribune Can-Am race at the Donnybrooke Speedway, With the field's only two competitive cars knocked out of contention early in the day, it was one of the team's easiest victories of the year. Revson thus got his fourth opportunity of the season to induige his popular custom of spraying victory champagne over the crowd in the winner's circle. He won $17,450 in purse and accessory awards on top of the $2,600 he won Saturday by qualifying for the pole position.

Gregg Young of Wilton, Conn., racing in the Can-Am for the second time, finished third in his McLaren M8D and became the first driver to reach 200 miles an hour on the Donnybrooke straightaway.

Vic Elford finished fourth in a McLaren MaE even though he had to change a flat tire on the next to last lap. Jo Siffert ran fifth in s Persche 917-10 after losing two positions on the last lap because of temporary fuel starvation. Jackie Stewart finished sixth in the L&M Lola T260-Chevrolet because, among other things, he lost valuable time in two pit stops. The Minneapolis Tribune Can-Am was the seventh of the 10race Canadian-American Challenge Cup for group 7 sportsracing cars with unlimited en-

Revson covered the 70 laps (210 miles) amund Donnehmoke's three-mile road course in 1 bour 45 minutes 45.7 seconds for an average speed of 119,137 miles an hour.

As in most Can-Ams, the event was competitive only in the early stages. Stewart, starting from the second row, seized the lead on the green flag by outdragging Rerson and Hulme into the first turn. Revson caught Stewart on the third lap and led the rest of the way. Stewart held into second place until the 22d lap, when he went into the pits to check on some vibrations he felt. The mechanics found nothing wrong and sent him back into the race. That cost him nearly two laps, which he never was able to make up. Stewart fell even farther back when he punctured a tire.

Dostoevski Apartment To Become a Museum

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 (AP).-The last apartment occupied by Russian novelist Fyodor Dostoevski is being converted into a literary museum. The museum will open on Nov. 6, the 150th anniversary of the writer's hirth.

The six-room epartment io Leningrad is being made to look as it did when Dostoevski wrote "The Brothers Karamazov" there, according to the Soviet oews egency Tass. Among the memorabilia on view will be items turned over to the museum by Dmitry Dostoevski, the 26-year-old greatgraodson of the writer who is a radio operator - technician in Leningrad.

WASHINGTON .- Recent stories could not agree on a candidate

"I am well sware of it," I say. "It ended in B dead heat and everyone weot home mad. They decided not to run anyone. It was all in my column."

"Yes, well, nevertheless, President Nixon is very upset about not having any opposition during an election year."
"I also wrote that. I said if he had no one to run against but himself, it could turn into one of the dirtiest campaigns in political history." "Well. be that as it may, the President is very concerned that if he has no opponent this fall, many people around the world will think the election was rigged."

"That's certainly the impression the Democrats would like to give." I say.

"Therefore," says Bunker, "I have been asked, by Mr. Nixon himself, to urge you to run against him for the Presidency of the United States." "But why me?" I protest.

"Because, sir, the President feels you would be the ideal opponent. You have the qualities of Jefferson, Lincoln and Elsenhower. You put principls before power, the country's good before personal gain. It's all in your FBI folder."

"Heck," I say, blushing, "is nothing sacred?" Bunker picks up the medicine bag and opens it. "The President has suthorized me to give you 25 millioo dollars in non-taxable, unaccountable funds if you will run against him in the fall."

I stare at the money and whistle. 'That's a lot of money, just for running for President." "We will direct your campaign for you, provide you with speechwriters, buy television time for you, put up billboards, and lend you Lawrence Welk to warm up the crowds."

"All right," I say, putting the money back in the bag. "But the day after the election I want to go back to being just plain John Citizen."

"Have no fear," says Bunker, putting on his homburg and walking toward the door. As he gets into his limousine a thought suddenly occurs to me and I yell, "Hey, suppose I win?"

But Bunker drives off. Apparently he doesn't hear me.

Graham Greene at 66: 'A Sort of Life'

By Israel Shepker ANTIBES, France (NYT),-

Since World War II Graham Greene, now 66, has found it harder and harder to write. It all takes longer and longer. "Age," he said, as though it were as painfully simple as that, and then he added: "Also one's afraid that one's said it oneself before. I find I forget B book very quickly after I've finished it, and then people write some critical work or other and point out the similarity between this situation in Book 8 and the situation in Book 2. It's boring. One wishes that one had remembered."

His autobiography up to age 27, "A Sort of Life," is heing published by Simon & Schuster in the United States this week. "My chief sickness is getting easily bored—a symptom of manic depression. What I cherish most is probably escape from boredom, escape from oneself, That can come from loving somebody, or from a good wine, or from travel. Or from getting involved in something which isn't one's own problem."

A Novel

Before he attacks the difficulties of a new book, he moves restlessly about his apartment constructing in his mind the story's essentials. 'I hate sitting down to work. I'm plugging at a novel now which is not going easily. I've done about 65,000 words-there's another 20,000 to go. I don't work for very long at a time—about an hour and a half. That's all I can manage. One may come back in the evening after a good dinner, one's had a good drink, one may add a few little bits and pieces. It gives one B sense of achievement. One's done more than "In the old days, at the beginning of a book, I'd set myself 500 words a day, but now I'd put the mark to about 300 words." Did he mean that literally-a mark after every 300 words? Precisely. With an x he marks the first 200 words, 600x comes next, 900x after 900 "I generally have the beginning, the middle and the end in my head, and hope that there are some surprises in between to amuse myself. The end sometimes alters. One's got to leave enough liberty to one's characters. One can't be absolutely sure what point they'll have reached at the end of the book.

"At the opening of a book one is thinking of the mood in which the whole book will move—the signsture time. In something written as an entertainment, one wants a quick mood, to excite the reader, keep him on the edge of his chair. For a book that is going to be slightly brooding I think one wants to prepare hy a slow movement at the beginning. For depressed moods it becomes very unpleas-

In Mr. Greene's novels, good and evil appear to be strong motive forces; he has been accused of obsession with evil at the expense of concern with good. But he demurred. "Tm interested in human beings," he said. "They aren't saints and they aren't evil men as a rule. I should have thought that only in one book had I tried to write about a wholly unpleasant char-ecter, and then at the end one pot in a doubt whether even he was as theologically damned as he seemed.

"Some people would say that there was a sense of morality inculcated into man at the beginning, that conscience is inherited in most people. I don't think I've ever met anybody who was without a conscience. Environment would have an effect, a religious belief would have an effect. Happiness and misery have their effect, too.

For the work now in progress, Mr. Greene has been devising, for the character presented as an ex-priest, a theology which accommodates evil "God in this theology is evil as well as good," explained the author.
"So there's B night side and a day side, and we contribute to both. We are part of the evolution of God-and Hitler obviously aids the dark side of God. whilst Gandhi, John XXIII and Chaves aid the day side.

"Talking as a Catholic, I would argue that Christ was a kind of overpowering expression of the day side-which was a guarantee that the day side could never be swamped. If God is torn as we are between the dark and the bright-and therefore suffers a certain division and anguish as we do-it makes Him s more sympathetic figure. "This is just playing with words, you know, just an amusing speculation," Mr. Greene added, as though he wanted to retreat, revise, or at least hand the ancient problem of evil to the ex-priest and let him puzzle and try for surprises.

A Summary

asked Mr. Greene if he could summarize what he had done with his life. "I think I've accomplished a little bit and I've falled a good deal," he replied. Tve written about two or three good books. The Power and the Glory, Travels With My Aunt' I think I'd put amongst them, and after that I'm not sure. I think The Quiet American' is oot a bad book.

"One fails in all sorts of ways in life, doesn't one, which are much more important than writing books. In human relations and that sort of thing." There are many things that bother Mr. Greene about the character he takes to be his own: 'I'm not nice to live with, One is impatient, one is irritable, one is imjust, one is probably intolerant."

What bothers you about the world?" I asked him, as I got up to leave his Antibes apart-

"That's a terrible question," he said. Mr. Greene has extraordinarily pale eyes, and the thought went through my mind that if eyes are mirror to the soul, anyone who intended to plumb the depths of this man's soul had his work cut out.

"There are so many things that hother one about the world," he said, "Injustice, intolerance. And that it all comes to an end."
